Lifeguard hero saves 10 year old

As relentless, crashing waves pummeled the shores of Seabright Beach in Santa Cruz, Calif., over the weekend, churning up sand and turning the surf into a salty foam, a teenage lifeguard with an unrelenting grip pulled, dragged and lifted a young boy from the water to bring him to safety.

A video captured the save and showed bystanders rushing into the surf in an attempt to help as violent waves sent the lifeguard and the boy under the water multiple times. Claps broke out as the lifeguard, with the help of another person, pulled the boy to the shore.

Sumit Rai, the father of the boy who was rescued, said "it's a miracle" his 10-year-old son was alive. Mr. Rai, who is separated from his wife and lives in Texas, said his son and 8-year-old daughter were vacationing with their mother in California. Mr. Rai said he learned about what happened in a phone call that night from his children, who he described as "extremely" close.

"To watch her brother go through a near-death experience is not a small thing," Mr. Rai said.

Mr. Rai said he didn't sleep for several nights after the phone call and described himself as the "biggest fan" of the lifeguard who saved his son. —The New York Times

Straw hat firebug nabbed in hill country

On the afternoon of July 26, when the Dove Fire was first reported to the Tuolumne County Sheriff's Office (TCSO) Dispatch Center, dispatchers also received several reports of a man wearing a straw hat running from the area where the fire started. Not long after, photos and videos of the man began circulating on social media.

The individual was later identified as a local transient, 30-year-old Jacob William Hoskins. Hoskins was recognized by members of the Tuolumne County Sheriff's Office and the Sonora Police Department in the social media imagery based on numerous prior law enforcement contacts.

A TCSO deputy initially contacted Hoskins; however, at that time there was insufficient probable cause to detain him. As the investigation progressed, a CAL FIRE Tuolumne-Calaveras Unit Law Enforcement Officer developed additional information, and a TCSO deputy obtained further investigative leads after speaking with one of Hoskins' associates.

Using this information, the deputy located Hoskins at Rotary Park in Sonora, where he also found the same clothing, including the distinctive straw hat seen in the photos and videos from the time of the fire.

Following the investigation conducted by the Tuolumne County Sheriff's Office, the Sonora Police Department, and CAL FIRE law enforcement, Hoskins was arrested by CAL FIRE on suspicion of violating California Penal Code § 452(c) – Recklessly Causing a Fire.

The Tuolumne County Sheriff's Office would like to thank our community.

The vigilance of community members who promptly reported suspicious activity and captured photos and videos of Hoskins proved invaluable to the investigation and ultimately contributed to his identification and arrest. The Dove Fire investigation remains under the jurisdiction of CAL FIRE

A welfare worker, visiting in the home of one of her clients, discovered a crippled child that had never gone to school because he was unable to walk. Her compassionate heart was deeply touched by his condition and she decided to do something out of the ordinary for him.

Initially, she took him to a distinguished orthopedic surgeon who performed several procedures to correct the problems in his legs. Then a podiatrist corrected the problems with his crooked feet. Little by little he learned to walk and run and play. He also learned to read and write and made enough progress to attend school with his friends.

One day, in telling this story to a group of her friends she said, "He is now a grown man. And I want you to tell me where you think he is and what he is doing."

After a few moments her colleagues began to reply: "A doctor?" asked one. "No," she responded. "A minister?" wondered another. "No," she replied. "I know," said a third, "a welfare worker because of your influence on his life."

"No," she said with tears in her eyes. "He is now in prison serving a life term for murder. You see, we spent all of our time in teaching him how to walk and run, read and write, but we did not teach him where to walk and what to read and who he should communicate with."

David prayed, "Teach me Your way, O Lord, and I will walk in Your truth; give me an undivided heart, that I may fear Your name."

What happens when God's people do God's work? Is there any evidence to His mercy and grace? Can those around us actually see Him at work?

The Psalmist said that "Surely His salvation is near those who fear Him, that His glory may dwell in our land."

In other words, when people become born again - accept God's salvation through faith in Christ - there will be evidence of God's Kingdom on earth. Christians will busy themselves in working with the needy, bring hope and help to those who are suffering, seek justice for those who are wronged and establish rules that are just and fair.

In Psalm 85:11 we read, "Faithfulness (to God's Word) will spring forth from the earth, and righteousness looks down from heaven." If we believe the Word of God, we are to live the Word of God and that means we are to do whatever is within our power to establish His Kingdom on earth.

Whenever people's hearts are right with God, we see God-things happen. The abolition of slavery and the end of child labor followed a resurgence of faith in God. The Salvation Army came to life when General Booth was convicted that God called him to bring God's love to the needy. Seeing children, who were neglected, ignorant and hungry burdened Robert Raikes to start "Sunday" school. Many educational and charitable institutions came into existence because God's people saw God's children in need and were convicted by His Spirit to do something about it. Evidence that righteousness on earth comes from Heaven!

to the officer's quick actions, training, and dedication, the driver regained a pulse and was given a second chance at life. Both occupants were transported to a local hospital for treatment.

The investigation revealed signs of alcohol and drug use by both occupants. Both occupants suffered from suspected drug use and alcohol impairment, resulting in an overdose. The driver was ultimately placed under arrest for driving under the influence (DUI) of alcohol and drugs.

What could have ended in tragedy instead became a powerful reminder of the difference one person's actions can make. It only takes ONE bad decision to change your life forever. Thankfully, no one else was injured.

Impaired driving doesn't just put your life at risk—it endangers everyone on the road. Whether it's alcohol, cannabis, illegal drugs, prescription medication, or a combination of substances, never get behind the wheel if you're impaired. Every year, more than 10,000 lives are lost nationwide due to impaired driving.

One good decision can save a life. Plan ahead, designate a sober driver, use a rideshare service, or stay where you are.

It's official—Linden landfill closed for good

The San Joaquin County Department of Public Works has completed the long-term closure of the Foothill Sanitary Landfill, marking a significant milestone in the County's long-term strategy to modernize solid waste operations, improve efficiency, and reduce costs for residents.

As of June 28, Foothill Sanitary Landfill has ceased accepting all waste materials, with operations now fully consolidated at the North County Recycling Center and Sanitary Landfill.

The decision follows a comprehensive evaluation of the County's solid waste system, which identified consolidation as the most cost-effective and sustainable path forward. Over the next 15 years, the closure is projected to generate approximately $80 million in savings for the Solid Waste Enterprise Fund.

"This decision reflects the kind of responsible, long-term planning our residents expect from us. By consolidating operations, we're reducing costs, strengthening our financial stability, and ensuring we can continue delivering essential services without placing additional burden on ratepayers," said San Joaquin County Board of Supervisors Chair Sonny Dhaliwal.

The closure was implemented in phases to ensure a smooth transition. Public self-haul services at Foothill ended in January 2026, followed by the discontinuation of all remaining waste acceptance in mid-2026.

To accommodate the transition, Public Works secured necessary regulatory approvals to significantly expand capacity at the North County facility, increasing allowable tonnage and vehicle limits. Environmental review conducted in accordance with the California Environmental Quality Act determined that the operational changes would not result in significant environmental impacts with mitigation measures in place.

"Closing Foothill and consolidating operations at North County allows us to operate more efficiently while maintaining high levels of customer service," said San Joaquin County Public Works Director Najee Zarif. "This approach not only reduces costs but also positions the County to meet future solid waste needs in a sustainable and responsible way."

Residents and commercial haulers will continue to have convenient access to disposal services. The North County facility—now the County's primary landfill—offers expanded capacity and is located closer to the majority of customers. Additional disposal options remain available at the Lovelace Materials Recovery Facility and Transfer Station, which oper-

Tight lines ...

Near the southern flank of Mount Shasta, springs and snow-melt converge to form the McCloud River. This Sacramento River tributary, held sacred by the Winnemem Wintu tribe, teemed with Chinook salmon “The winter run was the main sustenance source for the Winnemem Wintu throughout history,” said tribal member Gary Mulcahy. “We consider them the grandfather of all salmon.”

For several years, Winnemem Wintu leaders have collaborated with state and federal officials to reintroduce the critically endangered fish to this wilderness waterway in a historic effort to revitalize the McCloud and reconnect with their past. But a federal proposal to increase the height of Shasta Dam by more than 18 feet to provide more water to farmers now threatens the tribe’s land and could harm salmon runs. Contemplated for decades and gaining traction among Republican lawmakers, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation’s proposed Shasta Dam and Reservoir Enlargement Project would boost the capacity of California’s largest reservoir.

Since President Donald Trump took office for his second term, the federal government has not mounted any public effort to raise the dam. But Trump has taken several steps in that direction, including signing executive orders instructing federal officials to waive environmental rules and deliver more water to California growers.

Recently, the dam project appeared to get a push in the House Natural Resources Committee’s budget reconciliation bill, with a designation of $2 billion “for construction and associated activities that increase the capacity of existing Bureau of Reclamation surface water storage facilities.” Though the budget language does not name Shasta Dam, experts say it’s precisely crafted to facilitate the project.

“There’s no mystery here,” said Barry Nelson, policy advisor with the Golden State Salmon Association. “That language is designed to push the Shasta raise.”

Raising the dam was the “number-one priority” water project for the first Trump administration, Nelson said.

However, U.S. Rep. Doug LaMalfa, a Republican whose district includes Shasta and who helped draft the budget language, told CalMatters that while he endorses enlarging Shasta Dam, the reconciliation bill’s “funding is not for any specific project.” Last year, a bill that would have allocated funds for enlarging the dam while prohibiting state laws from obstructing the project died in the House. It was sponsored by 12 California Republicans, including LaMalfa.

The Bureau of Reclamation estimated in 2014 that enlarging Shasta Dam would cost $1.4 billion — roughly $1.8 billion in today’s dollars. Obtaining the array of state and federal permits for the dam could take years, and is likely to face court challenges.

The project would provide an additional 51,300 acre-feet of water per year to recipients — mainly farmers — of the Central Valley Project and the State Water Project, according to a federal estimate. That would increase the amount they receive on average by less than 1% , which Ron Stork, a policy expert with the group Friends of the River, referred to as “decimal dust.” The dam project would claim some of the Winnemem Wintu’s last remaining territory and could violate the state’s Wild and Scenic Rivers Act, which explicitly prohibits constructing reservoirs on the McCloud’s final miles before entering Lake Shasta. State officials have publicly opposed the project in the past. In 2013, the California Department of Fish and Wildlife said raising the dam would have “significant and unavoidable impacts” on the Sacramento River ecosystem. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has similarly warned federal officials that the project would restrict high-water flows and reduce fish habitat.

State officials declined to comment for this story. Bureau of Reclamation spokesperson Peter Soeth also declined to comment. Stork, a longtime opponent of the dam raise, said the Trump administration is liable to ignore the state law. Trump’s January executive order directed federal officials to deliver more water through the Central Valley Project “by increasing storage and conveyance ... notwithstanding any contrary State or local laws.”“We certainly expect some serious mischief here,” Stork said. “The president’s executive order more or less says, ‘Please find ways to accomplish my agenda by trying to get around state and federal law.’”

Mulcahy, the Winnemem Wintu’s government liaison, said Lake Shasta flooded 90% of his tribe’s historical territory. “Village sites, sacred sites, cultural gathering sites,” he said.

Increasing the dam’s height will do even more damage, he said, periodically inundating many important gathering places, including the Kabyai Creek burial ground, where dozens of tribal members were laid to rest after a vicious 1854 massacre by white settlers.

It would also flood a cleansing pool for Winnemem men, a riverside dancing mesa and a young women’s coming-of-age ceremony site called Puberty Rock. This, Mulcahy said, will fray some of the last remaining cultural threads holding together the tribe, which he said consists of about 140 members.

“We wouldn’t be able to hold the ceremonies that are necessary to fulfill our spiritual and cultural needs,” he said. The Winnemem Wintu are not included on the official list of federally recognized tribes, which could limit their influence over the project.

Polarizing farmers and environmentalists

Like many Delta and Central Valley water supply projects, the Shasta Dam raise has polarized farmers and environmentalists in a dispute over how it would affect Chinook salmon. Environmentalists and fishery advocates say it will imperil already declining salmon populations, while project proponents, including the Westlands Water District, say it will help the ecosystem.

MORE ABOUT: Fishing

Westlands provides water, imported mostly from the Delta, to San Joaquin Valley farmers who grow 150,000 acres of pistachios and almonds — their main crops — as well as other fruits, grains and vegetables.

But General Manager Allison Febbo said the Shasta project isn’t directly about water supply. Rather, she said, it’s meant to help fish. Febbo explained that increasing the reservoir’s volume will keep its water colder, which is essential for spawning.

If the plight of the fish improves, Febbo said, regulations on water diversions might be eased — which would amount to an indirect benefit to water users like Westlands.

“We keep getting ratcheted down as the species continues to decline, so our water supply isn’t going to get any better until the species gets better,” Febbo said.

LaMalfa also stressed that the project would be “a win-win” by increasing water storage and better insulating the reservoir’s cold-water pool.

“More water for people and more cold water for salmon,” the congressman said.

But Nelson, at the Golden State Salmon Association, said Shasta Dam has already “been absolutely catastrophic for salmon.”

“The idea that a Shasta raise would benefit salmon — particularly under this set of federal agencies — is absurd,” he said.

Completed in 1945, the dam blocked Chinook from reaching hundreds of miles of stream habitat. For the winter-run Chinook — whose unique life cycle involves residing and spawning in freshwater through summer — the ice-cold McCloud was their stronghold.

“It can be 110 degrees in the canyon there, and you can be standing in the river in waders and your legs are so cold it hurts,” said Rene Henery, California science director with the group Trout Unlimited, as he explained the importance of the McCloud to the future survival of winter-run Chinook.

Today, the fish — which enter freshwater in the winter — cling to existence in a short stretch of river downstream of Lake Shasta, surviving thanks to the release of cold water stored deep in the reservoir. However, this resource frequently runs out in the summer as the fish lay and fertilize their eggs, which can lead to complete spawning failures in lethally warm water.

“Dams don’t make water, so in a low-water year, raising the dam does nothing,” he said.

In wet years, he added, the enlarged dam will harm fish by capturing water that would otherwise flood vital wetland habitat downstream, like the recently restored Yolo Bypass, west of Sacramento. “The inundation we get on the Yolo Bypass is what’s keeping salmon populations hanging on in the Sacramento,” Henery said.

Jon Rosenfield, science director at the advocacy group San Francisco Baykeeper, added that “expanding the dam will capture more of the high flows (during wet years) that are now the only lifeline those fish have.”

a scratch-off lottery ticket for the first time in her life and scored a $100,000 top prize.

Gastonia resident Kahla Jeffries told North Carolina Education Lotteryofficials she stopped for gas at Will's Food Store on Hickory Grove Road in Gastonia and decided to buy a scratch-off lottery ticket for the first time.

"That one just caught my eye," Jeffries said.

The ticket, a $100,000 Cash Payday game, turned out to be a $100,000 winner.

"I didn't think I was looking at it right," Jeffries said.

Jeffries said her prize money will go toward a new car and saving for school.

'If I could save time in a bottle ...' 53 yrs later

July 27 (UPI) -- A man cleaning up the wetlands in New Jersey found a message in a bottle that had been launched by a 9-year-old girl 53 years earlier.

John Kauterman, co-founder of The Tidelands Initiative, was conducting a routine cleaning in the Upper Township wetlands when he came across a sealed bottle containing a 9-year-old's joke.

The note reads: "This bottle was adrift on August 20, 1973 on 2nd Street beach Ocean City as my captors were transporting me to an island off shore in the Atlantic. Please notify my family that a band of ruthless sponge fisherman are forcing me to dive for them in shark infested waters! Please return this note to my home in [address]. You may have saved my life! Thank you. Laurie Blair."

Kauterman shared a photo of the message to social media in the hopes of locating Blair, and the post eventually reached her sister, Allison Spencer.

Spencer explained that Blair had dictated the letter to her, as she was 16 at the time and had the better handwriting. They then launched the bottle from an Ocean City beach.

"My sister, who was a very creative and quirky person, had a really great sense of humor," Spencer told NJ.com. "She immediately latched onto this idea and she came up with the crazy story."

Kauterman learned Blair had died from cancer in 2019, and was also surprised to discover he and Blair shared the same birthday.

He mailed the letter to Spencer, who said she plans to frame it in a shadow box for display in her home.

"She was really confident at the time we wrote it that it was going to be found, so I think she would say, 'I told you so,'" Spencer said.

Police come to the rescue of Shetland pony

July 29 (UPI) -- Police in California "got in a pony pursuit" when a small Shetland pony was spotted running loose on a road in a San Jose neighborhood.

The San Jose Police Department said on social media that officers were dispatched recently on a report of a diminutive equine on the loose in a residential area.

"Thanks to the horsepower of our patrol cars, responding officers were able to locate the little pony trotting around in a neighborhood," the post said.

Police were able to contact the pony's owner and return it home safely. The owner said the animal had escaped the previous night.

"We are glad this little adventure seeker is back home safe and done hoofin' around," officials wrote.

Overdue book is w a y overdue—116 yrs.

July 29 (UPI) -- A Welsh library received an unusual visit from a man who arrived to return a pair of books his grandfather had checked out 116 years earlier.

Conwy Libraries said on social media that the man, identified as Mr. O'Sullivan, visited the Llanrwst Library recently to return two books his grandfather, Walter Griffith Owen, had borrowed from what was then the Llanrwst Public Library and Reading Room in 1910.

The post said Owen had served in both World Wars and was stationed in Conwy during World War II.

"Our staff were so excited to handle the books and to meet Mr. O'Sullivan for a photograph, and to be involved in their family story," the post said.

Trapped hedgehog gets another life

July 28 (UPI) -- Firefighters in England had to break through concrete to rescue a "wee hedgehog" found trapped in a drain.

The Ellesmere Fire Station said on social media that crews responded Friday to a "small animal rescue" situation that turned out to be a hedgehog trapped in an underground drain.

Volunteers from Cuan Wildlife Rescue were also called to the scene to help.

"Crews used small tools to break through concrete which exposed the drain (dug a hole) and crews released the wee hedgehog from its predicament," the post said.

The hedgehog was turned over to Cuan Wildlife Rescue for care.

Keep on truckin'-- still jammin' gears at 94

July 8 (UPI) — A 93-year-old Iowa man might soon become a Guinness World Record-holder for being the world's oldest truck driver.

Orrin Asmus, who will turn 94 in August, has been driving trucks since he was 19 years old, and has worked for McLaughlin Freight for the past 11 years.

Dan McLaughlin, president & co-owner of McLaughlin Freight, had Asmus submitted to Guinness World Records after a coworker checked online and discovered he might be the world's oldest truck driver.

The current record was set by Doyle Archer, who was 92 years old when his record was updated in December 2025. He first earned the title at the age of 90 in 2024.

Asmus has driven more than 5 million miles in his more than 70 years on the job, and has hauled cargo through every state except Hawaii and Alaska.

Almost 95 yrs old ... It is never too late to take up water skiing

July 8 (UPI) — A New Zealand great-grandfather was officially named the world's oldest water skier just a month and a half shy of his 95th birthday.

Bryan Murray was 94 years and 318 days old when he went water skiing on Auckland's Lake Kereta in April, earning him the Guinness World Records title for the oldest water skier (male). Murray started water skiing in 1955 and participated in numerous competitions.

"I didn't consider it initially but as I got older it became a challenge and I enjoyed it so much I just kept going. Also the family all participated in the sport which took us all over New Zealand for tournaments," he said.

"Most people tell me that I am an inspiration to people of all ages. It encourages me to know that I am leading the way for others to keep active."

Murray said he has no intention of stopping his favorite activity anytime soon, and plans to extend his record during the
